INTRODUCTION & MISSION

The African American community has a long history of racial discrimination and oppression, which could lead to enduring psychological consequences. Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs), created to empower and educate Blacks, can handle these age-long scars effectively.

Issues like dealing with predominantly white institutions, financial constraints and academic pressure that students at HBCUs must go through may worsen the situation pertaining mental health conditions. An important factor in setting up a safe environment for conversations on mental health as well as providing mutual assistance is developing a strong sense of community among HBCU members.

Encouraging open dialogues about mental health problems within the HBCU community can propel students to seek help, eradicate shame, and enable them prioritize their own well-being. Institutions' emphasis on mental health among those in the HBCU community can create a more accommodative and inclusive climate for all their students thus promoting resilience, academic excellence and whole-person wellness.

INTRODUCTION & MISSION

Black Americans, including many HBCU founders and students, have a long history of being denied the right to vote through tactics like poll taxes, literacy tests, and intimidation. These conversations help to acknowledge and understand this painful past. Despite progress, voter suppression tactics continue to be employed, disproportionately affecting Black communities. Open dialogue about these issues can help students become aware of these challenges and develop strategies to combat them. HBCUs have a strong tradition of civic engagement and social justice. When it comes to vending events expect agendas 1-2 weeks ahead of time. Discussions about voter oppression can inspire students to become active participants in the democratic process and work towards creating a more equitable society. By understanding the historical and contemporary barriers to voting, HBCU students can feel empowered to take action and protect their voting rights. These conversations can foster critical thinking, problem-solving, and leadership skills among students, preparing them to become effective advocates for their communities.

TARGET

We are making it our mission to target certain HBCUs based on their demographical locations:

Alabama

Delaware

DMV

Georgia

North Carolina

South Carolina

Texas

These states endure the biggest voter suppression issues. These states also represent the largest number of HBCUs in the country.

STATS & FACTS

MENTAL HEALTH

- In 2020, suicide was the third leading cause of death, respectively, for blacks or African Americans, ages 15 to 24.¹
- The death rate from suicide for black or African American men was four times greater than for African American women, in 2018.
- The overall suicide rate for black or African Americans was 60 percent lower than that of the non-Hispanic white population, in 2018.
- Black females, grades 9-12, were 60 percent more likely to attempt suicide in 2019, as compared to non-Hispanic white females of the same age.
- Poverty level affects mental health status. Black or African Americans living below the poverty level, as compared to those over twice the poverty level, are twice as likely to report serious psychological distress.
- A report from the U.S. Surgeon General found that from 1980 - 1995, the suicide rate among African Americans ages 10 to 14 increased 233 percentage, as compared to 120 percent of non-Hispanic whites.²
